World Cup Bid comes to Wilmslow Prep

In the run up to the half term break staff and pupils of the School welcomed Andy Anson, Chief Executive of the 2018 World Cup Bid, and former commercial director of Manchester United, to present an assembly about the Bid.

During the assembly the girls heard about the history of the World Cup and why it is important to host such a major sporting event. During the assembly the girls had some fun playing 'name the footballer' as photographs of the current England team were flashed up in front of them.

Andy brought a selection of World Cup Bid merchandise such as football shirts and scarves for the school to put to good use.

Andy lives in Wilmslow and his nine-year-old daughter is a pupil at the school, commenting on his visit he said: "Part of my job is to make sure the public understand what we are doing and we want school kids to understand too."

Commenting, Headmaster Paul Reynolds said: "It was a real pleasure to welcome Andy Anson to WPS. The girls thoroughly enjoyed learning about the World Cup Bid."
